Message from the President/CEO

Our mission is to be the most respected and profitable bank in our community. For more than 20 years, we have placed relationships first to the delight of our customers, employees and shareholders, and we relentlessly deliver the most compelling service and value.

This Code of Business Conduct and Ethics provides a guideline for how we align our day-to-day actions in service to our customers, employees and shareholders, always reflecting our Relationships F-I-R-S-T Core Values. EagleBank employees work hard every day to build a bank that is trusted and respected in the community, and as such, we do not tolerate unethical or inappropriate behavior, be it from employees, officers, directors or third-parties with whom we do business.

Remember, if you have any questions or concerns about what constitutes ethical or proper conduct for you or anyone else, you may talk to your supervisor or someone higher in the chain of command or contact the Ethics Office. You can also report suspected violations anonymously to our Audit Committee via our EthicsPoint hotline at 888-331-0609 or www.ethicspoint.com.

Building a great bank requires ethics and integrity, now more than ever. Thank you for living our vision and values and for your commitment to doing the right thing for our customers and stakeholders.

Sincerely yours,

Susan G. Riel
President/CEO
Eagle Bancorp, Inc. and EagleBank

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Who Needs to Follow Our Code?

Our Code of Business Conduct and Ethics (the “Code”) applies to all “Associates,” which refers to employees, directors and executive officers of Eagle Bancorp, Inc. and its subsidiaries (the “Company”), including EagleBank. In addition, we look to engage with third-parties that share our commitment to our Relationships F-I-R-S-T core values. We expect everyone to act in accordance with the highest standards of personal and professional integrity in all aspects of their activities and to comply with all applicable laws, regulations and Company policies, including this Code. Finally, we expect the Company’s Directors and Executive Officers to set the standard for ethical leadership by “walking the talk,” and we include in this Code additional responsibilities and duties for Directors and Executive Officers. Financial, Compliance and Risk Professionals, which includes personnel in Finance, Compliance, Risk Management and Human Resources are expected to adhere to a heightened standard of ethical conduct and eschew any appearance, no matter how small, of impropriety. The Board of Directors and CEO expect these professionals to lead by example.

Making the Right Choice

Although the Code addresses a wide range of business practices and procedures, it cannot anticipate every issue that may arise. If you are unsure as to whether something is a Code violation – or if something just doesn’t feel right – ask yourself:

Associates are strongly encouraged to proactively seek guidance and to promptly contact the Ethics Office with questions regardless of the nature of the matter. It is in the best interest of the Company that any and all potentially ethically and/or legally questionable behavior or practices be identified

Uncertain on How to Handle a Situation

Q: I have read the Code of Business Conduct and Ethics and have a situation that I’m not sure how to handle. I was thinking about talking to Senior Management or reaching out to the Ethics Office. What should I do?

A: When in doubt about how to handle a situation, run through the five questions listed below. If you are still unsure, either contact your Supervisor, someone higher in the chain of command or the Ethics Office to determine how best to proceed. If you are a Director or Executive Officer and are unsure about an ethical question, please contact the Ethics Office for further guidance.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

immediately. This allows the Company to correct or avoid these practices and take all actions necessary to protect the integrity of the Company. All questions raised will be received and handled seriously. Associates acting in good faith never have to fear retaliation for speaking up. “When in Doubt, Shout it Out!”

Ethical Leadership and Responsibilities

We are all expected to be leaders. We want everyone to lead themselves, lead the team and lead the business – in service to customers, communities, team members and shareholders.

Each of us must take responsibility for maintaining the Company’s franchise and reputation and ensuring that we always act with honesty and integrity. Directors and Executive Officers in particular have a fiduciary obligation of loyalty and care to the Company. Regardless of position, all Associates must:

- Act consistently with their duties of care and loyalty under applicable law;
- Act consistently with our core values;
- Be familiar and comply with this Code; applicable laws, rules and regulations; and Company policies;
- Be a role model for ethical leadership and support your fellow Associates when they ask questions and raise ethical concerns;
- Help maintain a culture of candor and respect where everyone feels comfortable speaking up;
- Never pressure an Associate or third-party service provider to do something for you that is inconsistent with this Code;
- Actively participate in and complete required training in a timely manner;
- Cooperate and be honest and accurate when responding to any investigation, regulatory examination, audit or similar type of inquiry.

When the Company authorizes an internal examination, inspection, inquiry analysis or review—whether formal or informal—to determine facts, all Associates must fully cooperate. Cooperation includes, but is not limited to:

- Promptly acknowledging and responding to requests for information;
- Making oneself available for meetings with investigating officials;
- Providing full, accurate and truthful information;
- Keeping confidential information learned or transmitted during the investigation, unless legal authorities direct disclosure;
- Preserving relevant information and documents.

Non-cooperation or obstruction of an internal inquiry is subject to disciplinary action, to include termination of employment.

Acting with Professional Integrity

Q: I am an HR recruiter and the manager of my department wants me to hire someone related to them. I don’t believe that the person is the best candidate for the job but I feel uncomfortable saying “no” so I extended an offer of employment. Did I do the right thing?

A: No. This is a violation of our Code and the Conduct, Ethics and Conflict of Interest Policy. Employees, especially Compliance and Risk Professionals, should never compromise their professional integrity. By extending the offer, you are not only allowing the conflict of interest between the manager and the employee to go unreported, but you are also creating a conflict of interest for yourself, by acting in your own interest as opposed to in the interest of the Company. The Board and the CEO expect you to perform your job by hiring the most qualified candidate for the position. If you feel uncomfortable saying “no,” you should promptly report this to the Ethics Office or the Audit Committee.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Reporting

It is the responsibility of all Associates to comply with the Code and to immediately disclose violations or suspected violations of any and all potentially ethically and/or legally questionable behavior or practices of which they are aware.

“When in Doubt, Shout It Out!”

If any Associate reasonably believes that some policy, practice or action of the Company or any of its representatives is in violation of any law, rule, regulation or the Code, he or she should promptly report the potential violation.

Directors, Supervisors, Managers and the Human Resource Department are required to report to the Audit Committee and Ethics Officer any suspected violation of any law, rule, regulation or the Code reported to them. The Audit Committee has specific responsibility to investigate and address the allegation.

Compliance and Risk Professionals are also subject to heightened compliance and conduct requirements. They are expected to lead by example for the Company. They should be vigilant of their professional integrity and strike the right balance between accessibility and impartiality. They should also have courage to question and address unethical practice at all levels.

Financial Professionals of the Company are subject to heightened compliance requirements as defined in the Code of Ethics for Financial Professionals as required by Section 406 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 (see Addendum for Code of Ethics for Financial Professionals). The Company strongly encourages and expects prompt disclosure of improper activities, accounting irregularities, or other suspected improper actions.

Where to Report and Go For Help?

Ethics Office

The Ethics Office is available for support to all Associates. The Ethics Office maintains records, answers questions pertaining to the Code, facilitates reporting of matters discussed in this Code and performs additional functions and assumes additional responsibilities as determined by policy.

Audit Committee

Associates who suspect a violation as explained above, or who have questions, complaints or suggestions should share their concerns with someone who can address them properly. You never have to raise your concerns directly with the individual(s) whom you believe may be involved in the violation at issue:

Reporting a Matter to the Audit Committee

Q: A co-worker told me that they have “borrowed” money from their teller drawer, but plan to pay it back tomorrow. I feel sympathetic to their situation as I know they struggle paycheck to paycheck. What should I do?

A: You should discourage the practice because it is against Company policy, and recommend to the co-worker that instead of “borrowing” the money, they should discuss their financial situation with someone who may be able to assist (such as their Supervisor, Human Resources, a member of Senior Management or the Employee Assistance Program). You must report the matter anonymously or with name attribution to the Audit Committee or Ethics Officer, providing the Audit Committee and/or Ethics Officer with details about the situation to facilitate further investigation.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

- In most cases, your supervisor is in the best position to address your concerns.
- If you are not comfortable or unsatisfied speaking with your supervisor, you are encouraged to speak with someone higher in the chain of command or with someone in the Ethics Office.
- If you are not comfortable or unsatisfied speaking with your supervisor, someone higher in the chain of command or someone in the Ethics Office, you are encouraged to contact the Audit Committee directly.
- If none of these options are suitable or resolve your concern, or you wish to make an anonymous report, you are encouraged to contact EthicsPoint at 888-331-0609 or www.ethicspoint.com. The EthicsPoint hotline is a direct link to the Board of Directors through the Chair of the Audit Committee.
- Directors should report to the Chair of the Audit Committee or other members of the Audit Committee in addition to the Ethics Officer.
- The Company uses EthicsPoint, a comprehensive and anonymous communication tool, to assist the Audit Committee, Board of Directors and management in encouraging the highest standards of personal and professional integrity in all aspects of the Company's activities and compliance with all applicable laws, regulations and Company policies. EthicsPoint is a secure and confidential communication tool that individuals inside and outside the Company can use to share information anonymously with the Audit Committee. EthicsPoint is not intended to replace or supersede normal managerial and Human Resources communication channels.

Supervisor Options to Resolve Employee Questions

Q: An employee of mine reported a situation to me and asked for my guidance. I reviewed the Code of Business Conduct and Ethics and am not sure of how to proceed. What should I do?

A: Use the five questions outlined earlier in the Code to assess the situation. If you are still unsure, vet the situation with your Supervisor, someone higher in the chain of command, or the Ethics Office to gain clarity on the situation.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

No Associate who, in good faith, reports a violation or suspected violation shall suffer harassment, retaliation, or adverse employment consequence. Examples of retaliation could include, but are not limited to:

- Wage or benefit reductions
- Disciplinary measures
- Demotions
- Negative or inaccurate performance evaluations
- Hostile attitudes
- Negative changes in job assignments or shifts
- Time off without pay
- Terminations

Such retaliatory behavior by any individual(s) will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination.

If any Associate believes they are experiencing retaliation for reporting a violation or raising an ethical question, they may file a written complaint with Human Resources or the Audit Committee via the EthicsPoint hotline 888-331-0609 or by filing a report at www.ethicspoint.com (“File a Report”).

Compliance with the Codes and Policy

All Associates are required to read, understand and comply with the principles contained in this Code, as well as all applicable laws, rules and regulations and Company policies, guidelines and procedures. All Associates have the responsibility to abide by the Enterprise Risk Management Policy/Program through adherence to the Bank's policies and by communicating any violation of risk management processes or internal controls to the Chief Legal Officer.

Violations of this Code are taken seriously and any employee who engages in unlawful activities or violates this Code or any of the Company's policies is subject to disciplinary action, which could result in termination.

Any director who engages in unlawful activities or violates this Code or any of the Company's policies is subject to reprimand, possible removal through legal processes or not being re-nominated as a director.

Associates further understand that any non-compliance could also result in civil and/or criminal prosecution under certain circumstances.

Self-Dealing

Q: One of my prospective customers told me that they could remodel my kitchen if I make sure that their loan gets approved. Is this self-dealing?

A: Yes, this is self-dealing and may violate criminal statutes. You must report this matter to the Ethics Office immediately and seek guidance on further communications with the prospective customer.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Self-Dealing

We have a responsibility to not:

- Take advantage of corporate opportunities for our personal benefit;
- Use corporate property or information belonging to the Company; or
- Compete with the Company.

Investments

You must not make any personal investment in an enterprise if the investment might affect or appear to affect your job performance or ability to make unbiased business decisions for the Company. If you made such an investment before joining the Company, your involvement at the Company changes or you otherwise are aware of an actual or potential conflict of interest, or the appearance of a conflict of interest, you must report the facts to the Ethics Office. Investments subject to this provision include, but are not limited to, investments in a public or private company that is a vendor to or competitor of the Company, or otherwise does business with or is doing a transaction with the Company.

Insider Trading

While working on behalf of the Company, you may become aware of material nonpublic information about the Company or other companies. Company policy and the laws of the United States and many states prohibit trading in the securities of the Company or any company while in possession of material, nonpublic information regarding the Company or the other company. This prohibition applies to stock, options, debt securities or any other securities of the Company or another company and is further described in the Company's Insider Trading Policy.

If you have material non-public information about the Company or another company, you may not execute any trade in the relevant securities. The Ethics Office can answer any questions about particular situations. The definition of "material non-public information" is broad. Information is "material" if there is a substantial likelihood that a reasonable investor would consider the information important in determining whether to trade in a security, or if the information, if made public, likely would affect the market price of the Company's securities.

Purchase of a Corporate Asset

Q: The Bank foreclosed on a borrower and is attempting to sell the property that was collateral for the loan. I am interested in purchasing the property. What should I do?

A: It is important that this potential transaction be reported to the Ethics Office as it poses a potential conflict of interest for you and the Company and would require review with the Audit Committee. Considerations include that the transaction must be conducted in an arms-length manner and on market terms. The method of financing the purchase must also be examined to ensure it does not pose an actual or potential conflict of interest. Appropriate mitigating controls would need to be established if the Bank agrees to allow you to proceed with the transaction.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Information may be material even if it relates to future, speculative or contingent events, and even if it is significant only when considered in combination with publicly available information.

Information is “non-public” unless it has been publicly disclosed. Information stops being nonpublic when it has been broadly disseminated to the public and a reasonable waiting period has passed to allow the information to be absorbed by the marketplace. Examples of adequate disclosure include public filings with securities regulatory authorities and the issuance of press releases.

It is illegal to “tip” or pass material non-public information to any other person regardless of whether you know or reasonably suspect that the person receiving such information from you will misuse such information by trading in securities or passing such information on further and even if you do not receive any monetary benefit from the tip.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Personal Investments in the Company's Stock

While the Company supports stock ownership of Company securities, Associates must exercise utmost care to avoid the appearance of impropriety in trading Company securities. Additionally, the Company's Directors and Executive Officers are subject to separate policies regarding trading in the Company's securities and are subject to additional securities laws affecting such trading.

Personal Investments in Other Securities

It is permissible to invest in a client's business if the interest is acquired through a public stock exchange and the Company has no access to confidential information or material nonpublic information about the client. However, utmost care must be exercised to ensure that the private interests of Associates do not interfere with the interests of the Company. Associates must always avoid any actual or potential conflicts of interest and recuse themselves from any decision-making involving personal investments in other securities.

Use of the Company's Names, Logos, Properties, Facilities or Relationships

You cannot use the Company's names, logos, properties, facilities, or relationships for personal benefit. See also "Company Assets" below. Prior approval from the Chief Marketing Officer or the Chief Operating Officer is required before using the Company's names, logos, facilities or relationships for charitable, pro bono or other business purposes.

Corporate Opportunities

You owe a duty to the Company to advance its legitimate interests when the opportunity to do so arises. You may not take for yourself a corporate opportunity that is discovered in the course of your association with the Company, nor may you compete with the Company. To avoid a conflict of interest, or the appearance of a conflict of interest, an Associate must obtain prior approval for a corporate opportunity from the Audit Committee, provided that the Company is first made aware of the opportunity and refuses to take advantage of it.

Investing in a Customer

Q: One of my customers does substantial business with EagleBank. I am knowledgeable about the customer's business activities and see a personal investment opportunity. Is it ok to invest?

A: Given your relationship with the customer, a personal investment may create a conflict of interest and you should disclose this potential conflict to the Ethics Office. The Ethics Office would discourage you from investing in your customer's business. In addition, if the customer's stock is publicly traded, you would be subject to insider trading rules and your knowledge of the business may be considered material non-public information which would limit your ability to trade the customer's stock.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Antitrust and Fair Competition

Antitrust and fair competition laws are intended to prohibit practices that restrain trade or limit free and fair competition. They include provisions against conspiracies to fix prices, attempts to achieve or maintain monopoly power or other agreements between competitors that divide markets or limit competition. The Company is committed to complying with the letter and spirit of applicable competition laws wherever we do business. Antitrust laws prevent the use of inappropriately obtained competitor information. The Company is guided by publicly available resources and best practices to understand business and industry trends in this area. We do not allow the use of competitor confidential information, nor do we share our own sensitive business information with competitors.

Some examples of activities that could be viewed as restraining fair competition include:

- Sharing information with a competitor about their and our customers, pricing, bids or market strategies.
- Unfairly discriminating in terms of price or services between similarly situated customers.
- Entering into any of the following types of agreement with our competitors that restrict free trade:
 - Agreements to fix, set, raise or lower prices, fees, interest rates or any other business terms.
 - Agreements to allocate markets, clients, territories or locations.
 - Agreements to boycott or refuse to deal with third parties.
- Entering into “Tying” arrangements, whereby customers are required to purchase or provide one product or service as a condition for another being made available.

As antitrust laws are complex, Associates should always consult the Ethics Office if they have any questions about antitrust or fair competition laws.

Transactions with Affiliates

Certain transactions between the Company’s subsidiary and its affiliates are subject to the provisions of Sections 23A and 23B of the Federal Reserve Act and enabling regulations such as Regulation W. You should consult with the Compliance Department on advice relating to Regulation W.

Vendor Kickbacks

Q: One of my employees has a very close relationship with one of the Company’s vendors and it seems that the Company is not getting the best deal from this vendor. The employee has just purchased a new car and I suspect the employee is receiving a kickback from the vendor to steer business their way. What should I do?

A: You should require that competitor bids be obtained for the work performed and you should report the matter anonymously to the Audit Committee, providing the Audit Committee with detail about the situation to facilitate further investigation.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Fair Dealing and Anti-Kickback

We are committed to dealing fairly with our customers, suppliers, competitors and Associates. Corporate purchases or sales of goods and services must not lead to Associates, or their immediate families, receiving personal benefits (kickbacks), rebates or improper payments. Any such offering must be reported immediately to the Ethics Office. See also “Gifts, Gratuity and Entertainment” below.

Furthermore, no person may take unfair advantage of anyone through manipulation, concealment, abuse of confidential information, misrepresentation of material facts or any other unfair dealing practice.

- Never request or accept any kickbacks or other inappropriate personal benefit from a current or prospective customer or supplier.
- Never use a customer’s money or property unless authorized by both the customer and by the Company.
- Avoid any actual or potential conflicts of interests in personal financial transactions with customers, suppliers or any other Company business partner unless the transaction is with a family member or other person with whom you have an established relationship separate and apart from your employment with the Company.
- Ensure your contracts and purchases of goods and services are entered into solely in accordance with legal and policy requirements and in the best interest of the Company.

In addition to the specific provisions outlined in this Code, Associates are required to comply with all other laws and regulations mandating specific requirements for publicly traded companies. See also addendum for Code of Ethics for Financial Professionals.

Conflicts of Interest

“Rights can be considered wrongs, depending on who is judging.”¹

We strive to maintain open and ethical relationships with all people and companies with whom we do business. We want these relationships to be free of any conflicts of interest, or any appearance of conflicts of interest, or other unethical conduct, whether actual or potential. You must avoid engaging, directly or indirectly, in any outside business activity, financial relationship or investment that competes with the Company or offers goods and services to the Company.

Perceived Conflict of Interest

Q: My manager’s friend is a handyperson. Whenever we need some work in our office, my manager calls her friend and, thereafter, the handyperson always receives the business. The friend does a good job, but I have always wondered if this was appropriate.

A: Your manager’s approach is creating an appearance of impropriety; however, you may not have all the facts. It may be that the handyperson is an approved vendor and has gone through all the necessary due diligence and approval process. If you are comfortable doing so, you should discuss this matter with your Supervisor, or someone higher in the chain of command, but if you do not feel comfortable, you can contact the Ethics Office or report the matter anonymously to the Audit Committee for further investigation.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

A “conflict of interest” occurs when the private interest of an Associate, agent or representative of the Company interferes—or creates the appearance of interfering—with the interests of the Company or otherwise adversely affects—or creates the appearance of adversely affecting—their obligation to exercise their best objective judgment when considering the interests of the Company. Conflicts of Interest are prohibited as a matter of Company policy, except to the extent permitted under this Policy and procedures adopted to implement this Policy.

Because of the possibility that it could create conflicts of interest or the appearance of conflicts of interest, employees may not accept outside employment with any business that is or may reasonably be expected to become a client of the Company.

All Associates must also be sensitive to any activities, interests or relationships that might interfere with, or appear to interfere with, your ability to act in the best interests of the Company and its customers.

Because it is impossible to describe every potential conflict, the Company relies on your commitment to exercise sound judgment, to seek advice when appropriate and to adhere to the highest ethical standards in the conduct of your professional and personal affairs. However, the (non-exhaustive) list below is provided to illustrate examples of explicit conflicts of interest:

- Associates may not have any financial interest, direct or indirect, in any transaction in which they exercise any authority on behalf of the Company. This includes an interest in any other person, corporation, trust or other legal or business entity that is a party to the transaction.
- Associates may not approve a loan to anyone related to them by blood or marriage.
- Associates may not receive loans on preferential terms other than as permitted by Company policy.
- Associates may not be a signer on a customer’s deposit account, have access to a customer’s safe deposit box or otherwise represent customers, without the prior written authorization of the Ethics Officer, Audit Committee or another appropriate representative of the Company. This section shall not apply to situations where a Company Associate signs on a customer’s account on behalf of the Company, for example, to protect a security interest, or to otherwise protect the Company’s interests or when acting on behalf of a family member or a recognized nonprofit organization.
- Associates shall not use or disclose confidential Company or customer information for his or her own benefit or for the benefit of a third party. Associates shall comply with the terms of the Company’s

Treasurer for a Bank Customer

Q: I am a branch employee and have been named Treasurer for a Non-Profit that has accounts at EagleBank. I am a signer on the account. Is this a conflict of interest?

A: This may be a conflict of interest and your relationship with the customer should be reported to the Ethics Office. The Ethics Office will suggest that you separate your role as a branch employee from your role as the Treasurer of the non-profit. You should not personally process transactions for the account and should work with other Associates relative to the banking needs of the Non-Profit.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Insider Trading Policy, including those applicable to the disclosure of material nonpublic information.

Outside Director, Officer and Trustee Positions

The Company encourages Associate involvement in our communities, such as serving as an officer or board member of a local cultural, social service or other not-for-profit organization. However, if an Associate believes that a potential conflict may exist between serving on such board and their role at the Company, they should contact the Ethics Office. When a transaction involving the Company is discussed by an outside organization where you serve as an officer or director, you should disclose your relationship with the Company and not participate in any discussions of, or decision about, the transaction. Special care should be taken when the organization has a banking relationship with the Company.

Public Appearances

If you have not been designated by the Board of Directors as an authorized spokesperson (e.g., Senior Staff, Chief Marketing Officer) for the Company, before publishing, making speeches, giving interviews or making public appearances that may involve the Company's business interests or impact its reputation, you must obtain prior approval from your supervisor and the Chief Marketing Officer. Materials will have to be reviewed and approved by the Chief Marketing Officer prior to the engagement.

All inquiries from the media relating to the Company should be referred to the Chief Marketing Officer. Only officially designated spokespersons may provide comments for the media.

Disclosing Threatened or Actual Legal Disputes

Conflicts may arise if you are involved in a threatened or actual legal dispute, such as a lawsuit, administrative proceeding, mediation, arbitration, dispute resolution, government or private investigation, rule-making procedure or similar process, either against or brought by a customer or vendor of the Company or other Company-related entity, and that may impact your decision-making abilities on behalf of the Company and/or impact the reputation of the Company. In such situations, you are expected to bring the matter to the Ethics Office and to refer that customer, vendor or third party to another Associate who does not have a conflict.

Reporting Lawsuits to the Bank

Q: My neighbor is a long-time customer of EagleBank and frequently comes to my office to transact their banking business with me. Recently, I had a dispute and the neighbor has filed a lawsuit against me. Should I report this to EagleBank?

A: The Ethics Office should be made aware of any lawsuits involving you and a customer. You should refrain from interaction with the customer and have another Associate handle the customer's banking needs.

If you are a Director or Executive Officer, the Ethics Office should be apprised of any lawsuits that you are a party to as part of your heightened reporting obligations.

Media Inquiry

Q: I received a call from a reporter asking a few basic questions, but the reporter assured me the conversation was "off the record." Do I still need to get permission to speak to them?

A: Yes, you should contact the Chief Marketing Officer to make them aware of the request prior to providing any information.

Borrowing from Entities Associated with the Company

Associates shall not borrow from customers, prospective customers, suppliers or other persons or companies with which the Company or its affiliates do business, except those engaged in lending in the usual course of business, and then only on terms offered to others under similar circumstances and under no circumstances in connection with a transaction involving the Company.

Employment

Employment and Supervision of Relatives

Immediate family members or co-habitants of current Associates, including but not limited to, parents, stepparents, spouses, siblings, children, stepchildren and in-laws (collectively, "Immediate Family Members"), are not eligible for employment if the employment would:

- create either a direct or indirect supervisor/subordinate relationship with a family member or co-habitant,
- create an actual conflict of interest or the appearance of a conflict of interest,
- create a situation where the Associate is involved in decisions that could impact the terms and conditions of employment of an Immediate Family Member,
- create an adverse impact on work productivity or performance, or
- cause the Associate to audit or review in any manner the Immediate Family Member's work.

If you become a family member of another Company employee during your employment, you may both keep your positions if you both do not work in the same area, and as long as neither one reports to or supervises the other. If both of you work in the same area, the Company will attempt to arrange a transfer, but the Company is not obligated to create a new position or make changes to the organization to achieve this result.

Immediate Family Members or co-habitants of current directors may only be eligible for temporary or seasonal assignments unless approved otherwise by the Audit Committee.

Outside Employment

Q: I run a small IT company on the side. Whenever I hear of Bank customers with an IT problem, I always make sure to recommend my company's services at a discount for being Bank customers. Is this permissible?

A: No, this is prohibited. You are actively soliciting the Company's customers for your own personal benefit.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Outside Employment

All cases of outside employment, including self-employment, require written approval from your supervisor or manager and Human Resources prior to engaging in such employment. Outside employment should not:

- Interfere with your Company responsibilities;
- Create a conflict of interest or the appearance of a conflict of interest;
- Result in competition with any of the Company's business activities, including offering similar products or services;
- Involve using Company property, Company work time of the employee or using the time of other Company employees during working hours;
- Leverage Company best practices and knowledge for the benefit of another employer;
- Involve actively soliciting Company customers, third parties or Company employees during the employees' working hours at the Company;
- Involve preparation, audit or certification of documents pertaining to Company business; or
- Involve being employed by another financial institution.

In addition, if you are permitted to engage in outside employment, you must not use or distribute any materials or products developed as part of your responsibilities.

Serving as an Expert Witness or Advisor

Serving as an expert witness or advisor or providing technical assistance in a litigation generally takes a significant amount of time and may create a potential conflict of interest with the Company. It may also put Associates in a position where their opinion might conflict with that of the Company. Associates must seek written approval from the Ethics Office before agreeing to serve as an expert witness.

Relationships with Third Parties

Associates must ensure that contracts entered into with third-party suppliers are done solely for the benefit of the Company and not because of any expected or perceived future employment benefit from the third party. Specific employment restrictions with third parties are outlined in the respective contract agreements with the third parties, but Associates must generally avoid any actual or potential conflicts of interest when negotiating a contract on behalf of the Company.

Working on a Side Business at Work

Q: I have a home business and sometimes need to use the Company computer to write letters and prepare spreadsheets. Can I use the Company computer?

A: Company assets should be used for bank business only. You should refrain from using Company resources for your personal benefit.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Duty to Maintain Professional Integrity

A potential conflict of interest should never be allowed to impact the quality and integrity of our service to the Company. Doing so would create a conflict of interest in itself. The Board and the CEO expect that all Associates will immediately report to the Ethics Office or Audit Committee anytime they feel that their objectivity, professional judgment, professional integrity and/or ability to perform their responsibilities to the Company is impaired as a result of an actual or potential conflict of interest, be it their personal conflict or that of another Associate in the Company. Directors in particular have an obligation to immediately recuse themselves from any decision-making where they could no longer be independent due to a change in relationship or circumstances.

Duties Owed to the Company after Employment

Associates are bound by any non-compete and non-disclosure agreements they may have entered into while employed by the Company. Work generated by the Associate during his or her employment with the Company is considered proprietary. As such, Associates are prohibited from tampering with or transferring any proprietary data and information for their use outside the Company while employed and thereafter.

Gifts, Gratuities and Entertainment

Bank Bribery Act Prohibition: Policy for Acceptance of Gifts or Other Favors

The Federal Bank Bribery Act and other laws make it a crime for an employee, officer, director, agent or attorney of a financial institution to seek or accept gifts or anything of value with the intention to influence or reward the individual in connection with any business transaction. These laws can apply to both the giver of the gift and the recipient. Convictions or violations can result in substantial fines and prison terms. Associates must comply with the applicable laws and the following policy to avoid potential prosecution of himself or herself or one of the Company's customers, prospects or suppliers. Associates should never solicit gifts (for themselves or for a third party) from any person doing business with the Company or in exchange for doing business with the Company. Associates and their families may not accept gifts or entertainment with a value (singularly, or in the aggregate where the gifts are part of a series of smaller gifts structured for the purpose of evading or circumventing the restriction) of more than $250.00 (or of any amount if the gift involves cash or

Cash Birthday Gift

Q: One of my customers always gives me $25 in cash on my birthday to thank me for helping her reconcile her account. Is this appropriate?

A: No, it is never appropriate to accept cash or cash-related gift card in any form or amount as a gift from a customer.

Handling Gifts from Customers

Q: Each quarter I receive a gift from a vendor with which the Company does business. Usually the value is about $100 per gift. I read the Code of Conduct and Ethics and feel that I may have violated the Code. What should I do?

A: Report the matter to the Ethics Office who will record the situation and advise you to contact the vendor and tell them that you no longer can receive the quarterly gifts based on the Company's Code of Business Conduct and Ethics.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

a cash-equivalent gift card from any supplier, vendor or customer doing business with the Company). If an attempt is made to pressure an Associate into accepting a gift exceeding $250.00 in value, the Associate shall thank the giver and explain that it would violate the Company's policy to accept any gift for personal use and disclose the attempt to the Ethics Office. A gift of more than $250.00 (e.g., tickets, phones, appliances, jackets, etc.) may not be accepted by an individual but may be accepted by the Company from vendors to be used as awards, recognition or prizes. Receiving an unauthorized gift or failing to return a gift at the instruction of the Company may be considered by the Company in determining whether to continue employment or service as an Associate of the Company.

If offering a gift could be seen by others as a consideration for an official or business favor, you must not give the gift.

There are laws restricting or prohibiting gifts that may be provided to government officials. Payment made indirectly through a consultant, contractor or other intermediary is also prohibited.

To facilitate compliance with applicable laws, gifts to government officials must be pre-cleared with the Ethics Office. Under no circumstances may you offer anything of value to a government official for the purpose of influencing the recipient to take or refrain from taking any official action, or to induce the recipient to conduct business with the Company.

Business Entertainment

Associates may accept or provide business entertainment, including meals and refreshments, only if such entertainment is common in their particular business and the cost of the entertainment is of reasonable and customary value. The purpose should be to discuss business or foster business relationships. Entertainment provided by others must be commensurate with the recipient's job responsibilities and should not be lavish or extravagant under the circumstances. As a general rule, the value should not exceed what the Company would normally reimburse as an appropriate business expense. The business entertainment should not:

- Involve inappropriate or illicit activities;
- Be frequent, or reflect a pattern of frequent acceptance from the same person or entity; or
- Create the appearance of an attempt to influence business decisions.

When travel arrangements and/or accommodations are to be paid for by a customer or vendor, you must obtain prior approval from the Ethics Office,

Political Contributions

Q: I am actively involved in a federal campaign. I often wear my EagleBank jacket at the political fundraisers in order to promote EagleBank. Is this ok?

A: While EagleBank enjoys your enthusiasm, wearing the EagleBank jacket may cause others to believe that your actions reflect the views of the Company; therefore, wearing the EagleBank jacket would be discouraged. The Bank is subject to various federal campaign laws and must be careful regarding its involvement in federal campaigns. Discuss this with the Ethics Office.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

RESPA

Section 8 of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act's (RESPA), the "anti-kickback" provision, prohibits the payment or receipt of anything of value in exchange for the referral of any real estate settlement services. You cannot provide anything of value (for example, cash, event tickets, gift cards, meals, outings, trips or gifts of other property) to anyone in order to obtain mortgage loan originations, applicants, applications or any other real estate settlement service. In addition, you cannot receive anything of value from anyone in exchange for providing business referrals related to mortgage loan origination or any other real estate settlement service. RESPA's definition of real estate settlement service encompasses practically all aspects and services associated with the mortgage lending process, from the loan origination/application taking through the loan settlement and closing process. Section 8 RESPA violations are subject to regulatory and criminal fines against the individual and possible imprisonment.

Political Activities and Contributions

You have the right to voluntarily participate in the political process. No one at the Company may require you to contribute to, support or oppose any political group or candidate. If you choose to participate in the political process, you must do so as an individual, not as a representative of the Company. Any overt, visible and partisan political activity that could cause someone to believe that your actions reflect the views or position of the Company requires the prior approval of the Ethics Office.

Dealing with Suppliers

In order to make the best use of Company assets and deliver value to our shareholders, the Company's policy is to purchase all goods and services based on price, quality, availability, terms and services. Affiliate transactions must conform to Sections 23A and 23B of the Federal Reserve Act and applicable regulations. Suppliers and service providers must adhere to this Code and other Company policies whenever appropriate, and agree to keep

Vendor Selection

Q: I am looking for a new vendor and have sent a Request for Proposal to three vendors of interest. One vendor invited my family to its headquarters in Orlando for a long weekend and provided airline tickets, lodging and tickets to a local amusement park. I'm excited to go, but am hesitant to accept due to the Code of Business Conduct and Ethics.

A: You are right. Turn down the offer as it violates EagleBank's gift limit as this gift exceeds $250. Report this to the Ethics Office.

Privacy and Confidentiality

No one wants the amount of his or her deposits, checks, overdrafts, returned checks or loans improperly disclosed. Likewise, business and financial information about the Company is confidential and should not be discussed unless it has already been reported to the public. The Company's policies and relationships are also considered confidential. Divulging information about a customer's business, about the Company's corporate and financial business or about the Company's policies and relationships, in any way, will be cause for the Associate's removal. These prohibitions continue following the termination of employment.

Confidential information about the Company and its clients and suppliers is to be used solely for banking purposes and not as a basis for furthering a private interest or as a means of making a profit.

An Associate must not disclose confidential information about one client to another client or to any other outside party. Disclosure to other Associates of the Company should be kept to a minimum, and on a need-to-know basis.

Privacy of Customer Information and Data Protection

Our most important asset is our customers' trust. Keeping customer information secure and using it appropriately is therefore a top priority. You must safeguard any confidential information our customers have with us.

You must also ensure that we use customer information only for the reasons for which the information was gathered, unless further use is allowed by law. The Company has in place privacy principles that detail specific commitments to customers, and processes that define, document, monitor and manage the security of information.

The Company also has in place procedures to respond legally to law enforcement and other government authorities that may require disclosure of customer information. Only authorized Company personnel may make such disclosures in accordance with the procedures and applicable law.

Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

Proprietary and Confidential Information

This applies while you represent the Company and continues after you cease your employment with the Company. You must not disclose proprietary or confidential information about the Company, or confidential information about a customer, supplier or distributor, to anyone (including other Company personnel) who is not authorized to receive it, nor has no need to know the information. The only exceptions are when such disclosure is expressly authorized by the customer, supplier, or distributor, or by applicable law (e.g., to supervisory authorities, appropriate legal process such as a subpoena, or appropriate Company authorities).

Examples of proprietary and confidential information include any system, information or process that gives the Company an opportunity to obtain an advantage over our competitors, nonpublic information about the Company's operations, results, strategies and projections, nonpublic information about the Company's business plans, nonpublic financial information, nonpublic information about customers, suppliers and distributors received in the course of your employment or association with the Company and nonpublic information about the Company's technology, systems and proprietary products.

You must take precautionary measures to prevent unauthorized disclosure of proprietary and confidential information by utilizing Non-Disclosure Agreements. You should also take steps to ensure that business-related paperwork and documents are produced, copied, faxed, filed, stored and discarded by means designed to minimize the risk that unauthorized persons might obtain access to proprietary or confidential information. You should also ensure that access to work areas and computers is properly controlled. You should not discuss sensitive matters or confidential information in public places and only under the most urgent circumstances.

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this Code, nothing contained in this Code shall be interpreted, construed, asserted or enforced by the Company to prohibit any person from reporting possible violations of federal law or regulation to any governmental agency or entity, including but not limited to the Department of Justice, the Securities and Exchange Commission, Congress and any agency Inspector General, or making other disclosures that are protected under the whistleblower provisions of applicable law or regulation. Further, nothing contained in this Code shall be interpreted, construed, asserted or enforced by the Company to prohibit or disqualify any

You should take special care to avoid discussion of work matters and to keep customer, employee and Company information confidential when you are at home. Examples of actual or potential conflicts of interest that could arise include a mutual customer of both banks or an acquisition in progress between the two banks.*
